1. Between 26 August and 3 September 1953, the vacated Falkensee restricted area continued to be guarded by civilians from the municipal administration. So far as is known no official orders have been given to release houses to their owners.
2. source learned from two civilians, wearing SED badges, who were posted at the entrance to Falkensee restricted area, that the further utilization of the area had not yet been decided upon and that the owners of the houses would possibly soon receive permission to inspect their properties.
3. On 7 September, the Falkensee restricted area was still guarded by civilians and it was prohibited for civilian population to enter the area. Source learned from a railroadman employed at Falkensee railroad station that Captain Zas (fnu) and also the headquarters which previously was stationed in the restricted area had transferred to Finsterwalde. About 50 railroad cars which had been requested by Captain Zas had been utilized in the transfer.
4. On 10 September, the quartering buildings at Falkensee restricted area were still unoccupied. The future utilization of this area is unknown. It was rumored that the buildings were left in very poor condition.
